

Although Low Power FM has its place in broadcasting, I feel that the expansion of LPFM should not displace the existing stations. K-LOVE, in particular, will come under threat of replacement with LPFM expansion and this is very concerning. K-LOVE serves both the local community and other communities nationally with the communication of outreach ministries to the communities and their personal support to the listening communities through their ministers/counselors (Compa Food Ministries is just one example of community outreach). K-LOVE's availability on a 24 hour per day basis is critical in keeping people in need in touch with resources to strengthen them, assist them with good counsel, and direction. They do this through a very positive format with wonderful music, and safe, wholesome values. I am already challenged to find any other stations with the same positive impact for my entire family. I feel the station has the same impact through the nation on the other communities it serves, so much so, that when I travel I make a point of locating the station abroad. I am cautious with my discretionary funds, but feel strongly enough about K-LOVE's impact that I am a financial supporter of this station. If the considered changes would impact K-LOVE by decreasing its current or future opportunities to broadcast or will threaten its entire existence, than I feel this expansion is detrimental to the welfare of the community, my family, and myself. Please realize I am one of many who feel this way. Not all people will take the time to voice their opinion, but my comments do speak for many in the community who are helped by the services and outreaches that are offered through K-LOVE radio. Sincerely, Cecilia Dymecki
